CANTERBURY BOMBED IN REPRISAL FOR RAIDS BY BRITISH

Small Raid by 25 Nazi Planes Fails To Dim Jubilation In England

HIT SHOPPING DISTRICT

Plans Go Forward For U. S. Participation in New Attacks on Reich

LONDON, June 1—(INS)—Striking in frank reprisal for Britain's mammoth air raid on Cologne in which 6,000,000 pounds of bombs left three-quarters of the great Rhineland industrial city in flames, German war planes early today raided Canterbury as plans went forward for American participation in new attacks against the Reich.

(A Berlin communique said flatly that the Canterbury attack was "in reprisal for the Cologne bombing.") News that England's famous old cathedral city, seat of the Primate of the Church of England, had been singled out by the Luftwaffe, failed to dim the jubilation felt over the record-breaking 1,250-plane attack against Cologne. Offensive plans for the future were highlighted by Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States Army Air Force, who made clear that American bombing squadrons would soon be in action along with the Royal Air Force.

Three waves of German bombers took part in the attack on Canterbury. High explosive bombs and incendiaries were dropped, causing considerable damage and casualties.

But there apparently was no comparison between this attack and the devastating raid on Cologne. A total of only 25 Nazi bombers came over, in contrast to the hundreds and hundreds which raided Cologne, streaking in over the city at six-second intervals to drop explosives of every calibre, up to and including giant death-dealers weighing 4,000 pounds.

The shopping and residential districts of Canterbury were damaged, but there was no immediate report to the effect that the cathedral itself had been hit.

William J. Gross Weds Young Philadelphia Woman

HULMEVILLE, June 1—The marriage of Mr. William J. Gross, of Urbana, Ill., and Miss Catherine Farley, Philadelphia, was an event of Memorial Day. The ceremony took place at 10 a. m. in the Church of the Incarnation, Philadelphia.

Mr. Gross, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gross, Philadelphia, resided in Hulmeville for several years during the summer season. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Farley, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross left Saturday evening for Chicago, Ill., where they will reside.

RAILROADER HURT

Thomas Johnson, 29, of 207 Lillian avenue, Trenton, a Pennsylvania Railroad brakeman, suffered lacerations of the head and abrasions of the right elbow Saturday when he was brushed from the side of a moving freight car at the Rohm and Haas chemical plant siding in Bristol. Johnson was treated at St. Francis Hospital, Trenton.

MERCURY REACHES 97

The highest temperature registered this year was reached on Saturday at 4:30 o'clock, when at the Rohm and Haas Co. weather observatory the mercury stood at 97.

Prepare Extensive Balloon Barrage System

A balloon barrage system—the most extensive in the history of modern warfare—today extended from Canada to Mexico, guarding vital West Coast military objectives from low-flying raiders.

The barrage is even more extensive than the famed balloons guarding Great Britain from low-flying Nazi planes and which have been credited with saving countless numbers of lives and inestimable numbers of military objectives.

U. S. Navy's Casualty List Boosted

Washington—The Navy's casualty list of World War II was boosted today to more than 8,500 when the Navy Department made public a list of 2,317 names—including 64 dead, 54 wounded and 2,199 missing.

By far the largest part of these casualties resulted from direct action with the enemy, but included are the names of those who lost their lives at sea or in the air while on active wartime duties.

NUMEROUS GROUPS ENTER PARADE AT HULMEVILLE

Ceremonies Held at Beechwood Cemetery, Saturday; Rev. Eastburn Speaks

MEDAL TO MISS MYERS

HULMEVILLE, June 1—One of the largest groups of local residents to appear in a Memorial Day parade here, participated on Saturday, with the usual exercises following at Beechwood Cemetery. The Rev. Albert W. Eastburn, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, was the speaker of the afternoon.

Groups from South Langhorne, Hulmeville, Parkland and Langhorne were in the line of march, traversing Bellevue avenue to Hulme and Main streets, and thence to Beechwood Cemetery for the program. The marshal of the parade was Richard A. Hopkins, a member of Jesse W. Soby Post, No. 148, American Legion. The groups in line included: Members of Soby Post and Auxiliary, and the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps in their uniforms of blue and white; Langhorne Sea Scouts, Langhorne Boy Scouts, Hulmeville Cub Pack and Boy Scout Troop, South Langhorne Girl Scouts, William Penn Fire Co. and Ladies' Auxiliary in uniforms of blue and gold, Hulmeville Defense Units led by Orville Morris, chief of the Emergency Police, Burgess Leon R. Comly, and president of Hulmeville borough council, Norman Davis; Parkland First Aid Squad and ambulance, school children.

At the grave of Jesse W. Soby in Beechwood Cemetery a ritualistic service was conducted by Soby Post members, with a salute by the firing squad.

The program which followed included: "America," assemblage; prayer, the Rev. Eastburn; remarks by chairman Hopkins; Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, Miss Catherine Myers; selection, drum and bugle corps; presentation of American Legion school award medal by George Thorpe, commander of Soby Post, and Mrs. Harry Heller, Americanism chairman of the Auxiliary, the recipient being Miss Catherine Myers; singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," assemblage. The medal given to Miss Myers was for outstanding traits of courage, companionship, scholarship, character and service. In making the presentation Mr. Thorpe said "The country will never rise higher than the soul of its womanhood."

The Rev. Eastburn, in his brief address, spoke of the idealism produced by the people of a country, he adding that it is for that idealism the peoples of the United Nations are struggling with the enemy. Mentioning the sacrifices made by those who have given their lives he urged that the people of the nation "Live your lives 365 days a year for the idealism for which they died."

The children who marched were served refreshments at the school house later, through courtesy of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Morrisville Man Dives Head-First Into Creek

PHILADELPHIA, June 1—(INS)—Peter Denks, 42, Morrisville, today was in a critical condition at the Philadelphia General Hospital, suffering head injuries received after diving 75 feet from the Tacony Creek Bridge into three feet of water.

More than 100 horrified spectators saw him shouting and waving from the guard rail and then dive as a police car drew up. Patrolmen John Youell and William Kalinknecht extricated him from the creek bed, for the momentum of the dive had buried him head-first in the mud.

Commencement Exercises Arranged for This Evening at Cornwells Heights

DR. LYNCH TO SPEAK

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, June 1—When the 18th annual commencement exercises are conducted in the auditorium of Bensalem Township High School this evening, 75 young folks will be graduated. The hour of the exercises is 8:15 o'clock.

The commencement theme is "The American Way of Life," with the following participants: Introduction, Lester Engle; The American Home, Betty Judd; The American School, Constance Johnson; The American Community, Peter Everett.

Dr. Clyde M. Lynch, president of Lebanon Valley College, will be the orator of the evening, he delivering an address upon the subject of "Livable Lives."

The high school orchestra will play, and a selected senior chorus will sing. Among the awards to be presented are the P. T. A. prizes, the Bushnell courtesy award, alumni athletic awards and others.

A Kurtz King, superintendent of Bensalem schools, will present the diplomas. The invocation and benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. James H. Bailey, of Trevoze.

Traffic Light During Week-End; No Accidents

Pennsylvania Motor Police at South Langhorne barracks experienced an exceptional week-end—one free from accident calls.

With traffic quite light for a holiday period, due to rationing of gasoline and tires, Saturday and Sunday were quiet ones for the motor police.

Both the Lincoln Highway and Bristol Pike were fairly free from traffic on the two days.

Hospitals in the area also experienced a two day season free of accident cases.

91-Year-Old Hulmeville Resident Feted at Dinner

HULMEVILLE, June 1—In honor of her 91st birthday anniversary which occurs today, Mrs. Helen Illick was honored at a dinner on Memorial Day, served at the Green Lantern Restaurant, Bensalem Township.

Places were arranged for: Miss Serena McElwee, Philadelphia; Mrs. Ferdinand Newhofer and daughter Mary, Mrs. Mary Witham, Oak Lane; Walter Illick, Finesville, N. J.; the Misses Grace H. and Clara L. Illick; and Samuel J. Illick, Hulmeville.

Church is Filled As The Rev. Fr. Lynn Sings Mass

St. Mark's R. C. Church was filled to capacity yesterday morning, when the Rev. Joseph Lynn, O. S. F. S., who was ordained to the Holy Priesthood in Wilmington, Del., on Saturday, sang his first solemn mass. The Rev. Henry Vergeiner, O. S. F. S., delivered the sermon.

The Rev. Lynn also gave his blessing to the congregation at the close of the mass; and last evening at 7:30 he was celebrant of solemn benediction in St. Mark's.

Later in the evening a reception and dinner took place at the home of the Rev. Lynn's father, William A. Lynn, Radcliffe street with a number of relatives and friends attending.

American Legion Awards To Be Given on June 15th

The American Legion awards to be given by Robert W. Bracken Post will be presented this year on June 15th. These are pins presented to the girl and boy in the eighth grade who are deemed to best exemplify certain outstanding traits.

The students are chosen upon their scholastic standings and other qualities which speak fine character. The faculty will select the recipients.

The pins will be awarded during assembly, a larger medal being given to the two students at later dates.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES ARE HELD

Students of Bristol and Bensalem Township Schools Participate

BOTH WELL ATTENDED

Baccalaureate services were held in the Bristol High School auditorium and also in Bensalem Township High School auditorium yesterday. Both services were well attended.

In Bristol the Rev. Paul R. Ronge, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, was the speaker while in Bensalem five clergymen participated in the service, with the Rev. Arthur Gibson preaching the sermon.

The Rev. Ronge, taking as his subject, "The New Order of Leaders," spoke in part as follows:

Jesus Christ sought to bring the Kingdom of God with its righteous and fraternal order against the predatory and unrighteous order which humanity had inherited from the past.

Jesus spoke of the Old Order of His day in strong but clear language when he said, "Ye who bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne and lay them on men's shoulders." And again, "Ye know the rulers of the nations lord it over them and their great men hold down the rest by force."

In moving among men to win them for the Kingdom and its order, he encountered the leaders who were on the deck before he came; the wealthy men who controlled the economic outfit; the official groups who held what political power there was; the zealots who dominated the religious life of a very religious people and made that which was light a heavy burden; and strong military leaders who were able to perpetuate a royal dynasty and fasten on the race heavy yokes and taxes to maintain the same.

Now Jesus' new order called for Democracy, humility, service and brotherliness. To bring about this new order, he called forth the New Order of Leaders. Their names are the twelve disciples in our text. "These twelve, Jesus sent forth." Matthew 10:5. "As you go," said Jesus, "Say the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Matthew 10:7. He gave them one simple principle to work on, "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." No longer to exploit but to serve; no longer to oppress the weak but to heal the sick; no longer to accumulate vast wealth but to "freely give." This New Order of leaders began to blaze the trail. It was in constant conflict with the Old order, until the day came when men sought to serve and we have seen an age when Educators, Judges, Scientists, Doctors, and Preachers, lived on the basis of service rather than selfish gain; when graft was taken out of politics and officials became devoted to public servants; when those in power exercised it for the welfare of the people. In other words as the spirit of the Kingdom of God came into the hearts and lives of the people, we began to form a new social order, which has found its highest expression in what we call "Democracy."

Whatever is contrary to the spirit of Democracy and Christian Service

PRIZE-WINNING ESSAY IN COLONIAL DAMES CONTEST WRITTEN BY STUDENT IN YORK JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

The prize-winning essay of the Pennsylvania Colonial Dames contest, written by Charles Egge, 216 West Maple street, York, when he was a student at Hannah Penn Junior High School, was read before a special Hannah Penn assembly, recently. Charles is now in the 10B class at William Penn Senior High school, York.

The text of the essay on "Patriotism—What It Means to Be an American," follows:

"Patriotism is a noble sentiment. Next to love of the Creator is the love of one's country. A man's or woman's soul must indeed be dead if he is not proud of the land which protects him. 'We Americans should be proud of our land when we think of the tremendous sacrifices made to found and maintain it.'"

"Our forefathers were willing to venture on unknown waters to fight against great obstacles because of a fierce, inspiring love for liberty, for religious freedom and for justice. No sacrifice was too great for them to make."

"We are proud to think of men like Nathan Hale, who said, 'I regret that I have but one life to give to my country.' Patrick Henry loved liberty and he voiced the sentiment of every true American when he cried, 'I care not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death.'"

"We must be loyal to our country and to our flag lest the proud heroes of the past will have sacrificed and bled in vain."

"Something of that sentiment is expressed in Nancy Byrd Turner's patriotic poem, 'Boy, Bare Your Head.'"

"A true patriot would never do anything to dishonor that flag or to destroy the liberty for which it stands—liberty purchased at so great a cost."

"The country which protects its citizens, which allows them to earn a livelihood at their chosen work has a

A Bridges For A Browder

Washington, May 30.

THE CIO union which telegraphed President Roosevelt asking him to reverse Attorney General Biddle's order deporting the alien, Communist labor leader, Harry Bridges, misconceives the facts. What they ask is that the President reverse himself. What they assume is that Mr. Biddle made this decision without consultation with or approval from the President.

OF COURSE, this is a mistaken assumption. No person capable of reasoning clearly will believe that in this highly controversial and important case Mr. Biddle, independently and upon his own initiative, took an action which seems directly to clash with Mr. Roosevelt's own action of last week when "in the interest of national unity" he released from prison the Communist Browder. It is unthinkable that Mr. Biddle would not have apprised the President of his intention to issue the Bridges order, or that he would have issued it without the President's disapproval either of the order or his strong indictment of the Communist party as subversive.

CABINET MEMBERS who desire to stay in the Cabinet do not act in such matters without full Presidential knowledge and approval. It would be unintelligent and improper not to conform to this recognized rule. Certainly, in this case it was not violated. To think otherwise is to be naive and it can be accepted as fact that Mr. Roosevelt's responsibility for the Bridges deportation order is exactly equal to his responsibility for the Browder order. In the one, he acted himself; in the other, he used his At-

UNIFIED SERVICE HELD BY GROUPS ON MEMORIAL DAY

Legion, Sons of Union Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars Combine in Program

THE REV. SOLLA SPEAKS

Service Held in St. Mark's Cemetery Addressed by Paul J. Barrett, Esq.

Memorial Day orators here on Saturday called upon the people to adopt a spirit of sacrifice, and to strive to preserve those principles and ideals for which those whose memory was being honored and revered, had died.

Three memorial services were held, one in the Bristol Cemetery by a united group of veterans and sons of veterans, another by veterans of foreign wars; while the third was in St. Mark's cemetery by members of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion and the members of Col. J. M. Gosline Camp, No. 28, Sons of Union Veterans.

In the Bristol Cemetery Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., was in charge, acting for William DeVoe, commander of the Bracken Post. The Rev. Arthur Gibson, chaplain of the Post, offered prayer and there were three selections by the Bristol High School Glee Club, under the direction of Charles Quigley, musical director of the Bristol schools.

In his opening remarks Mr. Schmidt called attention to the fact that the service was a "unified one in which the Legion, Sons of Union Veterans, and members of Joseph A. Schumacher Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were participating. The firing squad is also a union of the groups," said Mr. Schmidt.

Mr. Schmidt stated that the union of the groups was typical of the united nations and a united country which today are striving upon the field of battle.

"Many of our members are today working in munition factories; some here today may next year be in foreign fields engaged in the great struggle to preserve those things which we hold sacred."

There were brief remarks by Ralph Maddox, commander of the Schumacher Post. Mr. Maddox called upon the assembled people to refrain from giving information which might be of advantage to the enemy. "Don't go home and say that you saw 35 car loads of tanks go over this railroad here today. Remember," he cautioned, "silence is golden."

Commander Harry White of the Sons of Union Veterans, said that in 1953 General John A. Logan, commander-in-chief, issued a general order and that on May 30th each post of the Grand Army of the Republic gathered to decorate the graves with flowers gathered from the land which those who had died had died to preserve and to protect.

Two veterans of the Spanish-American War, Thomas Tanner and Jacob Hellings were introduced.

The speaker of the day, Major Andrew G. Solla, member of the Chaplains Corps of the United States Army, and now stationed at Fort Dix, gave a stirring address and said that Memorial Day should mean much to us. "It should awaken memories of those who fought for an ideal and those things which we today are enjoying; and hope by the help of God to continue to enjoy."

"Many of those who were in the last great war may be called back into service. I hope that these children with us today will carry on this Memorial Day custom as others have carried on, in memory of those who fought and today are silent in death."

Major Solla took to task those who have been spreading propaganda that the morale of the boys of '41 and '42 is not as it should be. "Many folks

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN

(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Ever heard of Vineland, N. J.?

Probably not—25,000 population, ladies aid meets every Tuesday, choir practices Thursday night, everybody knows the chief of police by his first name.

Nothing special about Vineland.

Except that they bought $500,000 worth of war bonds and stamps!

That's all! They just bought $500,000 worth of war bonds and stamps!

Just a half million dollars and more for Uncle Sam!

How many war bonds and stamps has your town bought?

Funny people those Vinelanders—pouring their money into war bonds and stamps.

Buying democracy when there are so many other nice things on the market. So many other glittery, shoddy, cheap things.

Thought for the day: Vineland, U. S. A.

THEY'LL SOON FIND OUT

Joseph Daniels declared in an interview on his eightieth birthday anniversary that the "good old days" of which people speak have never existed. They were a myth, he contends. Looking back into the past, he finds nothing that would compare with the present. Jefferson and Franklin, he believes, would much have enjoyed the gadgets now common in American life.

"What if we are having rationing and priorities and will have to do without some of our gadgets for a while?" he asks. "We'll appreciate them all the more when we get them back unrestricted again."

Mr. Daniels, of course, is a competent witness. He lived much of his life when gadgets were few compared to the present. But there are people, including octogenarians who have different views on this matter. As rationing increases and more and more products become unobtainable, those who contend that there really were "good old days" will find themselves in a position to make another comparison. And they are quite likely to agree with Mr. Daniels if only for the reason that their viewpoint has changed.

This is something with which Hitler undoubtedly failed to reckon. In initiating a type of warfare which was to deprive Americans of gadgets, viewed as practically indispensable, he probably did not realize that he was bestowing upon his future enemies a firm resolve and determination to achieve victory.

Americans cannot even contemplate with anything less than anguish a world devoid of gadgets.

THE RAILROADS

The railroads are turning in an emergency war job that has won the admiration of the country. The explanation is in the fact that management had faith in the vital part which the roads would play in either an expansion of the defense effort or in war. It was management that took the chance in increasing the supply of rolling stock and improving operating facilities. Management is responsible for the fact that, in 1941, about 60 per cent more freight service was obtained from each car than in 1917 and 1918.

Latterly the Interstate Commerce Commission helped to overcome the labor difficulty by passing operating cost increases on to the people in the form of higher rates, but this was only after the roads had been both starved and looted under government auspices.

When the call came, the roads rose to the crisis. The real story of the troop movement following Pearl Harbor can not be told until after the war, but it was carried out in view of the people and they know that it set a new record in railroad service. The general freight load has been handled efficiently, and the tank car equipment is now being used at better than its rated performance.

Passenger traffic rationing may be necessary, but until recently the roads took on the enormous troop and freight movement without serious interruption of their regular passenger business. All this, the people will well note, has been done under private ownership and management.

An American mission is asking guarantees from Vichy's man on the spot about Martinique. If the man doesn't respond, the implication is America will make its own guarantees.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol July 22, 1880. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

One house in Bristol, it is said, is furnished with paste-board shutters.

Last Friday, the "Republic" made the trip from Cape May to Philadelphia, distance 105 miles, in five hours.

The open air concerts of the band on Wednesday and Saturday evenings are quite an attraction, judging by the crowds of people who attend them.

A writer in the Advance states that Tullytown young men never fight about the girls, as there are plenty of them, enough for home use and New Jersey exportation in addition.

The family of Thomas J. Duffield, of Hulmeville, and a young man named Harry Goslin, who lived with them, were, on Tuesday of last week, poisoned by eating pudding upon which sugar was used which was found to contain Paris green. . . . "Harry Goslin, a boy living with Mr. Duffield, brought the sugar the second time from the store about noon on Monday. Laura, a daughter of Mr. D., received the sugar and used some the same day for preserving, and on the next day she used some of the same sugar on the blackberries she was making into a pudding. Up to this time the sugar was taken, as needed, from the paper bags in which it came from the store. There was about one pound left in a paper bag; this she put into the sugar bowl which was kept for family use; this she did about half an hour before dinner. At dinner the pudding was found to need more sweetening, and the sugar bowl in which the balance of the sugar was placed was put on the table, and the sugar taken from it and used with cream as sauce.

All the family at home, including Harry Goslin, ate the pudding with this sugar on it, excepting Mrs. D., who had a headache at the time, and all were poisoned except Mrs. D. The pudding left uneaten on the general plate, as well as that left on individual plates, was thrown out into the yard and eaten by the chickens, some of which have since died. Miss Laura's hands were poisoned, and was first noticed on Tuesday afternoon when she was sick. The family are all getting better, but still feel some bad effects of the poisoning."

The "Bristol Rowing Club" made their annual excursion to Coney Island yesterday. Among those who went with the party were: Oscar Thomas, John C. Stuckert, G. M. Dorrance, W. H. Grundy, W. D. Harned, George A. Shoemaker, Prof. W. T. Sooy, Henry S. Booz, Jesse Booz, Anthony Joyce, Lewis McMakin and Joseph Janney. The whole company numbers about 40.

Fifteen years ago the land between the railroad tracks and the canal which runs through the town of Bristol was little else than a swamp, and the only industrial establishment in this portion of the town was a forge, since disappeared, at which iron plates were made for monitors and iron-clads built in Philadelphia during the late war. A cotton mill was erected near the forge about that time, but its proprietor failed or gave up the business, and it was subsequently started as a woolen hosiery mill, and is now in successful operation. Soon after the Bristol Improvement Company was formed, and through their efforts and the authorities of the town exempting mills from taxes for 10 years, the growth of Bristol has been sure and rapid, while the old swamp is fast becoming the place for a variety of manufacturing establishments. This company, to encourage these enterprises, erect mills for parties, and adapt them specially to the wants of those who are to occupy them, and charge a rent that will return a fair interest upon the investment.

The Great Game of Politics

the torney General. But in both instances the action was his and it is silly to ask him "in the interests of national unity," or for any other reason, to reverse the Biddle ruling.

THESE BEING the facts, the President's course in these two cases is not easy to reconcile with reason. It is, of course, conceivable that in the Bridges case the decision was made wholly on the legal merits. It is conceivable that Mr. Biddle, putting aside all thought of political effect, reached a decision and made a recommendation to the President. And it is conceivable that the President, putting aside all thought of political effect, concurred in the recommendation. Those things are conceivable, but it must be admitted ted they do somewhat strain the credulity.

FOR ONE reason, Mr. Biddle has given proof in a recent speech that he considers New Deal politics not incompatible with the conduct of the war. For another, Mr. Roosevelt has given proof, in his appointment of Mr. Hague's candidate for judge, that the war has not entirely banished practical politics from his mind. For another, there was no pretense that the Browder release was based on anything except the President's desire to promote national unity. For still another, the Biddle decision overrules not only that of Dean Landis, made two years ago, but also that of the most recent board to review the Bridges record a year ago. So that the legal merits can hardly be wholly clear.

CONSIDERING all these things, it therefore seems reasonable to assume that questions of public policy and national unity entered into the Bridges decision as in the Browder decision. How, then, is the Administration attitude of pro-Communist in one and anti-Communist in the other to be explained? In the absence of any other explanation, it does not seem far-fetched to believe that the second was intended, at least partially, to balance the first. So far from promoting national unity, the release of Browder did the reverse, as the President must have realized from the widespread and almost unanimously unfavorable comment with which it was received.

THE GENERAL view was that in releasing Browder, whose guilt was not questioned, and whose sentence was not extreme, the President had made a mistake. Instead of increasing national unity it created national resentment. Certainly, it strengthened the unfortunate feeling that this Administration has always been too tenderly inclined toward those with Communist affiliations. The Bridges order goes a long way to counteract that feeling. Resentment of it comes wholly from the Communists, the CIO radicals and the uninfluential but very articulate Communist publications. On the other hand, the numerous citizens who were irritated by the Browder release are temporarily gratified at the prospect of deporting Bridges. It is to be hoped "in the interests of national unity" that the courts will sustain the Biddle order and that there will be no weakening in the Administration, now it has been issued. There is no way accurately to measure them, but it is safe to say that there are one hundred people in this country who approve the Bridges order to one who resents it.

IF THE President had kept Browder in jail, where he belongs, and in addition, had ordered, through Mr. Biddle, Bridges to be deported, the favorable reaction would be in the same proportion. Incidentally, the men here best informed about Russia are completely convinced that Stalin, our ally, has a very low opinion of the Communist leaders in America and is not in the least interested in what happens to them. What he is interested in are the planes, tanks, guns and other war materials which we are sending to help him repulse the invading Hitler. So long as we keep them flowing, for all he cares, we can put the whole Browder family back in jail and deport every one of the little Bridges who infect our labor unions.

Marvelous New Features With Mighty Circus

The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will exhibit in Philadelphia at 11th and Erie, two weeks commencing Monday, June 1, with the most sensational performance in the history of this most sensational organization.

The Big Show offers a magnificent new super-spectacle, "Holidays," created by Norman Bel Geddes. It employs 2000 people, and cost over $100,000.

Other featured productions are: "The Ballet of the Elephants," directed by George Balanchine and scored by Igor Stravinsky; "Fiesta del Torres," a colorful pre-bullfight ceremonial, produced by John Murray Anderson; a new aerial ballet, starring Ely Ardelty, and a new Grand Finale, a stirring, patriotic surprise.

Alfred Court will present simultaneously three new mixed groups of performing wild animals, featuring his new revolving treadmill tigers.

There are 500 world renowned artists in the performances, among them the champion high wire Wallendas; Roberto de Vasconcellos, king of horsemen; the Cristiani family of bareback riding stars; the three Flying Conello troupes; the De Ocas, aerial thrillers; the three Fernandez troupes, aerial marvels; Truzzi, juggling wonder; La Louisa, flying trapeze star; the Pilades, acrobatic sensationalists, and almost countless others.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

"I hope the clothes will do for the time being, Mr. Charles," said Sheldon.

"Fine—just a bit loose in front. Chet must be putting on weight."

"I'll have a talk with Mr. Masters sometime today. He has your old measurements, but it might be safer to have him visit you again."

"Much safer, I'm sure. You think I've changed a lot, Sheldon?"

"Not in appearance, sir. You look very fit."

"And yet there is a difference?"

"In your manner, perhaps. But that's natural. It's a nervous strain one can well understand after all you've been through."

"I'd understand it better if I knew what I have been through. But never mind that. Time for breakfast."

He walked across the courtyard, entering the house from the terrace. No one had yet appeared; the usual new-lit fire was burning; the usual blue flames distilling a whiff of methylated spirit from under the copper dishes. The Morning Post and Times on the little table. A cat on the hearth—new cat, who looked up indifferently and then resumed a comprehensive toilet. Wilson was standing by the dishes, trying hard to behave as if the return of a long-lost son were one of the ordinary events of an English household.

"Good morning, Mr. Charles."

"Morning, Wilson."

"What can I get you, sir? Some kedgeree—or ham and eggs—kipper—kidneys?"

"Suppose I have a look."

He eased a little of his embarrassment by the act of serving himself. He knew Wilson must be staring at him all the time. As he carried his plate back to the table he said: "Well, it's good to be back."

It was a remark without meaning—a tribute to a convention that did not perfectly fit, like Chetwynd's clothes, but would do for the time being.

"Yes, indeed, sir. Very glad to see you again."

"Thanks." And he opened The Times, the dry and crinkly pages cragging another memory. "You still warm the paper in front of the fire, Wilson?"

"Yes, sir. I always had to when Mr. Reimer used to come down—it's got to be a sort of habit, I suppose."

"Queer how one always associates big things with little things. I get the whole picture of my childhood from the smell of toasted printer's ink."

"Yes, sir."

He ate his ham and eggs, scanning the inside news page. Trouble in Europe—the usual Balkan mix-up. Trouble in Ireland, and that was usual too—British officers assassinated. Not much of a paper after the holiday. A long letter from somebody advocating simplified spelling—Jove, were they still at that? Now that the war was over, it seemed both reassuring and somehow disappointing that England had picked up so many old threads and was weaving them into the same pattern.

Then Chetwynd, eldest of the brothers, began the procession.

"Hello, old chap, how are you?"

"What a thing to say! But still, what else?"

(Miss Ponsonby, his old governess, had once adjured him: "When people say 'How are you?' the correct answer is 'How are you?' If you tell them how you are, you show yourself a person of inferior breeding. . . . "But suppose, Miss Ponsonby, he had once asked, 'You really want to know how somebody else is, mastn't they ever tell you?')"

However he answered: "Hello, Chet. How are you?"

"Want you to meet my wife, Lydia. . . . Lydia. . . . this is

MacKenzie-McCahan Nuptial Ceremony Performed Saturday

A beautiful spring wedding took place Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Margaret Clarke McCahan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Clark McCahan, 316 Hayes street, and Mr. George Wright MacKenzie, son of Mrs. Agnes MacKenzie, Punxsutawney, were united in marriage at a nuptial mass with the Rev. Fr. E. Paul Baird officiating in St. Mark's R. C. Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Katharine Keating, Linden St., presided at the organ, rendering a number of selections. Mrs. James Swank, Lafayette street, sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because." Mr. Percy G. Ford, Nelson Court, sang "O Lord I Am Not Worthy," and numerous other hymns. Mrs. William Denight and Miss Elizabeth McCahan, sisters of the bride, were her attendants. Mr. William Denight served as best man, and Mr. Joseph Kryven and Mr. William McCahan, were ushers.

The bridal gown was of embroidered chiffon over satin. A finger tip veil gracefully fell from a small visor of shirred net trimmed with a cluster of orange blossoms. White satin sandals, and a bouquet of white flowers completed her costume.

The bridesmaids were dressed in white gowns, the bodices being of lace and full skirts of nylon. Large white net hats, trimmed with clusters of red forget-me-nots, were worn. Red sandals and bouquets of bright spring flowers tied with red streamers finished their costumes.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was served at Flannery's dining room, South Langhorne. Fifty guests were present.

For the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. MacKenzie are travelling for several days throughout New York State. Upon their return they will reside in a newly-furnished house in Wisconsin.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Thou who art to be found by those who truly seek thee, known by those who love, seen by those whose heart is pure, direct our footsteps and arrange our thoughts so that we shall not only seek, but find. Create within us clean hearts and renew our spirits so that our eyes may see the glory of the coming of the Lord. May we so live that when that glorious day has come we might hear the words of Christ, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Prize-Winning Essay Written By Student in York Jr. High

right to expect that its citizens will be loyal to it, will fight for it and, if need be, lay down their lives for it.

"Just as a patriot said long ago, so do we repeat in these days of stress, 'Now is the time for every good man to come to the aid of his country.'"

"We must be out and out Americans. We must say, 'Uncle Sam, where-ever you can use me, whether at home or abroad, I stand ready to defend my country and to protect her citizens."

"When we think of Washington, Benjamin Franklin and Lincoln, we say to them with all the patriotism we can muster, 'You have done your part, we will do ours.'"

"But the big question is: What is our part to be? What best way to give expression to the feeling of awe and devotion which lie deep in every American heart?"

"Americans are world-famous as men of action. Printed definitions of patriotism are easily read and forgotten. Popular spirited songs and flowery speeches on the merits of patriotism are flying thick and fast through the country on the air-waves of radio, but the only sure way to show what patriotism means to an American is by action."

"To an American housewife, patriotism means feeding her family wisely and well on a careful budget; to a farmer, it means getting the best crops out of his land and disposing them at a fair—not an exorbitant profit; to a man in industry, it means doing his job thoroughly without sparing himself; to a student it means applying himself in such a way that through training his mind and body, he will in after years be an asset to his country; to a soldier it means training himself in the best possible manner so that he will be of greatest value to his country in helping to defeat the forces which are trying to destroy it; to our government officials, it means honest striving for the greatest good of all, at the sacrifice of personal ambitions."

"To every American in 1942, patriotism means more than saluting the flag, or knowing all the words to the Star Spangled Banner; it means more than Did Samson Feast on a Lion With Stomach Ulcer Pains?

The Bible tells us how Samson feasted on a lion. It isn't likely that he could have done so if he suffered after-eating pains. Those who are distressed with stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas pains, heartburn, burning sensation, bloating and other conditions caused by excess acid should try a 25c box of Udgas Tablets. a stirring of the heart when the flag goes by or the band begins to play. The only real meaning of patriotism for America in 1942 is 'Service through Sacrifice.' When Winston Churchill promised his people, 'Blood, sweat or tears,' he was giving England a definition of patriotism—a definition which Americans are adopting for themselves."

"For Americans today, patriotism should spell defense—defense of the lives, property and the rights of fellow Americans."

FIVE PROFESSIONAL BOUTS SCHEDULED FOR SEASON'S OPENING OF ST. ANN'S ARENA BY PROMOTER CLEM CIPPARONE

The St. Ann's A. A. arena, Wood and Franklin streets, is expected to be a hive of activity tonight as five professional boxing bouts are scheduled under the direction of Promoter Clem Cipparone, of Philadelphia. First bout will get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

Promoter Cipparone has spared no expense in securing the best talent available for his opening number and most of the boys carded are well known to fight fans of this section. In fact, two of the lads, Joe Waldron and Joe Dugan are local lads.

For his inaugural windup, Cipparone has matched Tony Maglione, Trenton youth, with Henry Blackwell, San Francisco, who is making a tour of the Eastern states. At the present time, Blackwell is residing in Philadelphia and has made a number of appearances in Philadelphia rings.

But Maglione is so close to Bristol that he can be considered a Bristolian. Maglione was started on his boxing career in the same St. Ann's ring when he started amateur boxing under the Purple and Gold colors of the local organization. At one time here, Maglione possessed a winning streak of eight straight and fought the best amateurs of the Middle Atlantic district. Even at times, some of the best Philadelphia boys in his class refused to mix gloves with the lanky Trenton boy.

After his amateur work here, Maglione went to the Jersey amateurs and immediately made food. Then "Bushy" Brooks, Trenton trainer, took him under his wing and thus he started his professional career. He made good at the beginning but started to slip and many feared that his book had closed.

But not Maglione. He wanted a comeback and comeback he did. Just recently he trimmed Ralph Griffin, Newark, which has put him in line for bouts with Lew Jenkins, former world's lightweight champion, and Freddy Archer, New Jersey's welterweight champ.

This bout tonight can mean a lot for Maglione. It could mean that he is ready for Archer or if defeated mean that he must wait until another opportunity arises.

Joseph "Jobby" Dugan, Otter street lad, will bear the watching of the local fans. Dugan got his start here in the St. Ann's ring. He fought but two bouts and scored knockout victories. Then he went into the A. A. U. sub-novice tournament and finished it up by winning a three-round decision over Joe VanLoon to win the crown. Dugan had to get up off the floor to cop this decision as VanLoon was one of the hardest punchers in the amateur ranks. Dugan will fight Sammy Correll, Salem, N. J.

The hard-hitting Clem Kinsey, Yardley colored heavyweight, is expected to run into trouble with the Polish steel-worker, Stanley Perock, of Bethlehem. Kinsey also fought for St. Ann's and scored two knockouts here before injured.

Frank Lowry, former A. A. U. champion, who also fought here on various occasions and in particular with his two bouts with Willie Crupin, is matched with Freddie Nebo, also of Philadelphia.

Joe Waldron, Bristol, who has fought several Philadelphia engagements, is scheduled to fight Billy Williams, of Mount Holly, in the other preliminary bout.

The seating arrangement of the local fight place has been set to seat close to 2,000 fans and Promoter Cipparone hopes for good support from the fans.

BADENHAUSEN NINE BLANKED BY DIAMOND

EDDINGTON, June 1—The first no-hit game of the season was hurled on the Turner field, Friday night, as "Eddie" Sullivan did the trick against the Badenhause team in a Bristol Suburban League game. Final score was: Diamond, 11; Badenhause, 0.

Sullivan pitched excellent ball as he set back the boiler-makers inning after inning without trouble. He fanned six batters and gave up one pass. In the final inning he fanned the side. He retired every batter to face him in every inning except the third when three Badenhause players reached base on errors and a pass. Poor baserunning prevented the Cornwells team from scoring here.

The winners had 11 hits and scored in every frame.

HURLERS' BATTLE

Boccardo Holds Munition Boys To One Lone Bingle

The Voltz-Tenaxo team snapped out of its doldrums long enough to beat the Hunter nine, Friday night, on St. Ann's field. The contest was a hurler's match between "Kempis" Boccardo and "Eddie" Lada with the former pitching the gasoleers to a 1-0 victory.

In blanking the munition boys, Boccardo held them to a lone bingle, a single to right field by Angelini in the sixth inning. Lada held the Voltz team to five hits and whiffed seven batters.

The lone tally of the tilt was registered in the sixth when Danny Mazzillo doubled and scored on a hit by Berry.

BRISTOL A. A. SPLITS HOLIDAY SCHEDULE

The Bristol A. A. club split even over the week-end losing to Glenside on Saturday by the score of 2 to 1. Stanley Dick worked for Bristol and pitched good ball, but a couple of errors was the cause of his defeat.

Doster's perfect throw to the plate was fumbled by Vanzant letting in the winning run.

Yesterday the Bristol club gave the strong Fisher A. A. Club their first defeat of the season. The score was 6 to 5. Leonie Heister was on the hill for the local boys and after a bad first inning pitched good ball backed by a hustling club. The features of the game were hitting of Hunter, Palumbo, Fekner, Heister and the fast hitting of the A. A. club.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Aerial Camera for use on Scout and Observation and Reconnaissance planes is essential to both the Army and Navy air forces in planning battle formations and in obtaining information on enemy fortifications and movements. They look something like a cannon, and cost about $3,400 apiece.

The aerial cameraman can plot wide territories in bold relief so that Army or Navy Intelligence can make accurate measurements of enemy territory. We need many of these cameras so necessary to the air arms of the Army and Navy. You can help buy them with your purchases of War Bonds. Invest at least ten percent of your income every pay day, and help your county go over its War Bond Quota.

Unified Service Held By Groups On Memorial Day

asked me what about the morale of the boys of '41 and '42; how are they; and what are they doing?"

The Major described his experiences with the 150,000 troops in the South. He saw thousands of the boys at reception centers and said "the morale is as high and as good as it was in '17 and '18. I want to tell you folks here today that your sons today are worthy sons of noble sires. They will give a good account of themselves.

"This is the day when people of America should adopt a spirit of sacrifice and do away with the spirit of selfishness. Adopt a spirit of giving.

"Why are men and women selfish in times like these. Why are they not thinking of the future of their country, the future of themselves and the future of their children?" asked the speaker.

Members of the Schumacher Post went to the grave of Joseph Schumacher in the Bristol cemetery and conducted a ritualistic service.

At St. Mark's cemetery prayer was offered by the Rev. Albert Glass, assistant rector of St. Mark's church and a member of the Bracken Post.

The oration was delivered by Paul J. Barrett, Esq. Mr. Barrett gave a stirring talk and one which aroused those present to the pinnacle of patriotism. "It is a privilege and an honor for me here today to take part, although a small part, in these exercises. The spirit of devotion and faithfulness is truly edifying and typical of Americans in the way you have continued to pay honor and respect to those who have fought for things American.

Mr. Barrett gave a history of the American flag because he said all should know the history of the flag and "what it represents if we are to survive because the history of the flag is the history of America.

The history of our country is inscribed within the folds of the flag," said the speaker.

"Our citizenship places upon us greater responsibilities. Responsibilities of patriotism and responsibilities of sacrifice.

"A united nation is a monument to those who today we are honoring."

belongs to the Pre-Christian and pagan age.

Now it seems that part of the World has gone back to the conditions of the time in which Jesus lived. You, the members of this year's class, have before you the call to the New Order of Leadership. I ask you to take your place by the side of these disciples and the multitudes that have followed him.

We have two great tasks before us; namely, the first and immediate one of winning the war, which we shall do; and the second task of rebuilding the world after the war. Every serious thinker knows that great changes must be made in the social order to come. That we may avoid the mistakes of the past, purge from among us whatever of selfishness, hatred and suppression of individual rights there may be; we must begin now to study the commission of Jesus to these twelve disciples. Our spirit must be the spirit of Jesus who said, "The son of man is not come to be ministered unto but to minister." Remember his words. "He that is greatest among you shall be a servant." Begin now to think in terms of service.

I earnestly believe that the Christian boy and girl and the Christian man and woman are those alone who can bring about this new order in which joy, peace and happiness shall be the common right and possession of all. We plant and water, but unless God's sun shines upon our work it is wasted. When we build this time we want to build, backed by the aid of God. It will be the Christian trying to bring about the Kingdom of God and prompted by the spirit of Jesus that will find the right plan, the right law and the order.

In the New order to follow the war, there will be needed ability and ambition, but they are to be yoked with the service of all. Not he who kills and makes men slaves, but he who makes life safe and happy shall have the statue set up in his honor. Not the great warrior and killer but the great worker and the great healer shall have his name treasured. There is work to do—much work—hard work—up-hill work—but work we must for the night is coming when men cannot work. Our nation will need Leaders, in every department, in every field of service; the world will need leaders. The wrong kind of leaders will lead us right back into the dark days that Jesus found in His time; the right kind of leaders shall lead us into the fuller life and greater freedom.

You, members of this year's class, are faced with a great temptation. Members of graduating classes in former years had to be told that there were few or no positions for them. Yours is the opposite. You will enter at once into many trades and professions and will receive high wages for your service. The time will come when you will have to make the great readjustment, namely of dropping to the normal wage. You are in danger of forming a false estimation of yourself. If your idea is to go forth to serve you will never think in terms of mercenary returns but will work for the good you may do. Go forth determined that you will find your place and will labor with others to bring to pass those things that we so highly desire.

If 50,000 graduates of this year's classes would range themselves alongside of Jesus and look at the present world as open-eyed as he looked at his world, see where the standards of conduct are in contradiction with His Spirit and then work to change them and raise standards, the world would feel the effect in ten years. And those that would strive in this way would live by faith in the higher commonwealth of God and have some of its nobility of spirit.

"We are living—we are dwelling, In a grand and awful time; In an age, on ages telling, To be living—is sublime.

On! Let all the soul within you, For the truth's sake go abroad! Strike! let every nerve and sinew, Tell on ages—tell for God!"</
